

I hope that this edition of your Bulletin finds all in preparation for the National. I know I look forward to this week each year for the chance to see a concentration of the best of our breed, catch up with old friends and make new acquaintances. We are so fortunate to have this opportunity on an annual basis. The Central Division is hard at work putting together what will be a great show at the Sawmill Creek Resort in Huron, OH. I know they will succeed through their dedicated workers and your support. During the Board's July meeting we discussed the danger of Parvo and how it could affect puppies at the National and/or entered in the Futurity. If you are bringing a puppy to the National please make certain your pup is as protected as possible. Other actions taken at the July meeting were to approve the Tulsa Renaissance site for the 2016 National. The Board felt that this site will work well for our National – kudos to the South Central Division on the selection of this site. You will also see in the motions that we created a 'Memorial Committee' to offer members the opportunity to recognize Dane friends and family who have passed. Please contact Linda Cain with any information you would like shared. Her email address is fromtheheartkennel@sbcglobal.net Another exciting development is the link on the GDCA website to the Quintessa Pedigree Database. If you have not spent any time cruising through the pedigree information that Glenn Beech maintains take a few minutes to familiarize yourself with it. The address is <http://www.quintessa.net.au/Databases/search.html> Unfortunately we will not be printing a yearbook celebrating the 125th anniversary of the GDCA. The interest in advertising fell severely short of anything we could consider for the publication. If you have any questions please feel free to contact either myself or Rita Suddarth.

Until next time... Dianne

AKC REPRESENTATIVE-DALE TARBOX

At the AKC delegates meeting, the GDCA was congratulated for being one of the first Parent Clubs to support the ongoing effort to provide these trailers to areas that really need them.

There are now 8 trailers in place and 4 more being made.

I would love for us to contribute toward another trailer and I would like your help. If each affiliate club could donate as little as $75.00 we could actually support 2 more trailers, almost 3, (and I would make that happen) . So pass the hat around and see what we, the Dane community can contribute

. Cindy Harwin will be in contact with the Affiliate Club Reps . I know we can make this happen!

Any ideas as to how to make this a fun competition between clubs or divisions..... Let us know !!

GDCA HEALTH AND RESEARCH-NEIL O'SULLIVAN

The Great Dane community needed to develop a resource which would facilitate long term investigation into genetic tools for Great Dane breeders, owners, and lovers of this breed to improve breeding outcomes. The idea of sequencing the Great Dane Genome was developed by the Health and Research Committee of the GDCA. The committee then identified researchers with expertise in this field and a proven record of working on the Great Dane. Dr Leigh Anne Clark was selected because of her earlier success finding both the merle gene and harlequin genes which have proved great tools for breeders of Harlequin, Mantle, Black, Merle family. This work on the Harlequin gene and this work on Great Dane Genome sequence were fully funded by the GDCA and The GDCA CT. The power of your dollars donated and ear marked for "Research". We have many more projects in lined up which just await successful fund raising efforts in the Great Dane Community.

WOBBLER'S STUDY UPDATE

Magnetic Resonance Imaging In Great Danes With And Without Clinical Signs Of Cervical Spondylomyelopathy ("Wobbler syndrome") Ronaldo C. da Costa, DMV, MSc, PhD, Dipl. ACVIM – Neurology Paula Martin-Vaquero, DVM, Dipl. ACVIM – Neurology
The Ohio State University

Background-Cervical spondylomyelopathy, commonly referred to as "Wobbler syndrome", is a very prevalent neurological disease affecting the neck of Great Danes. This disease frequently affects young Great Danes, who develop an excessive growth of the bony structures that encase the spinal cord at the level of the neck. This excessive bone growth causes compression of the spinal cord and nerves, originating pain, and an uncoordinated and weak gait. A definitive diagnosis of Wobbler syndrome is achieved using advanced imaging, such as computed tomography (CT) and magnetic resonance imaging (MRI). In general, MRI is considered the imaging technique of choice because it provides the most information on the presence and severity of spinal cord and/or nerve compression. There is some available information on the MRI appearance of the neck region of Great Danes with Wobbler syndrome. However, no study has ever investigated the MRI appearance of the neck of healthy Great Danes. In order to understand why a disease such as Wobbler syndrome develops, it is important to understand what are the differences between the neck region of those dogs that do not have signs of the disease and the dogs that do. Also, in both people and dogs, healthy subjects can sometimes show MRI abnormalities that may never cause a problem for that particular individual. It is important to know about and learn to recognize these MRI abnormalities that may be present without associated clinical signs, so MRI studies are not overinterpreted and no unnecessary treatments are pursued.

Methods-The purpose of our study was to compare the MRI studies of the neck region of Great Danes with and without clinical signs of Wobbler syndrome. Two groups of Great Danes were enrolled. The first group included 15 Great Danes with no history of neurologic disease and a normal neurological examination (control dogs). The second group included 15 Great Danes with clinical signs consistent with Wobbler syndrome. All dogs underwent MRI of the neck area under general anesthesia. The presence and severity of spinal cord and nerve compression, the presence of abnormal spinal cord tissue changes, and the presence of any bony abnormalities were recorded. In addition, a total of 7,350 measurements were obtained in this study (245 measurements/dog). Some of the measurements obtained included: area of the bony joints that encase the spinal cord in the neck region; height, width, and area of the vertebral canal and spinal cord; size of the aperture for the spinal nerves; width of the intervertebral discs; and vertebral body length and height.

Results-Only one control Great Dane showed spinal cord compression, while all of the Great Danes with Wobbler syndrome showed multiple, severe areas of spinal cord compression. However, mild to moderate nerve compression was present in 11 out of 15 healthy Great Danes, and very severe nerve compression was present in all of the Great Danes with Wobbler syndrome. From the measurements obtained, we can confirm that the size of the neck bony joints is markedly larger in Great Danes with signs of Wobbler syndrome when compared to healthy Great Danes. As a consequence of the abnormal enlargement of the bony joints, Great Danes with Wobbler syndrome have a smaller space to accommodate the spinal cord at the level of the neck area and spinal cord compression results, which is why affected dogs develop signs of weakness and incoordination in their gait.
Conclusion-Marked MRI differences exist between Great Danes with and without clinical signs of Wobbler syndrome. However, it is important to remark that some MRI abnormalities can also be seen in healthy Great Danes with normal neurological examinations. The results of this study highlight why it is so important to correlate the neurological examination with the MRI findings. If only MRI images are reviewed without knowing the clinical status of the dog, the potential for overinterpretation of mild imaging abnormalities that may not be causing any clinical signs exists.
